Newest Art in Public Spaces

Bill and Sandy Miller are avid collectors of fine art and were immediately drawn to the Patricia Carlisle Fine Art Gallery, where they found a number of intriguing bronze sculptures by David Pearson. Both Sandy and Bill were drawn to the same sculpture, "Reverence". With arms outstretched, each holding a white bird they both say it gave them a sense of being welcomed with her gesture of peace and respect.

After enjoying "Reverence" in their home for fifteen years, Bill and Sandy decided to bequeath the sculpture to Tennessee Technological University. "Reverence" was installed at the TTU Appalachian Center for Craft and Design on October 22, 2023.

The Center director, Professor Kimberly Winkle commented, "We hope that "Reverence" will inspire our students to strive for excellence in their own work. We are so honored and grateful to have the opportunity to share it with our students and the wider community."

Other notable recent public art installations by David Pearson include a retrospective show at the Santa Fe Botanical Gardens, the New Mexico Governor's Mansion, the City of Edmond, Oklahoma and as the featured artist at the Abiquiu Inn.

Save the Date for 2024, Saturday, September 21, 4-7 pm Equinox VIP Client Party

David's personal Stonehenge is calibrated for the two equinoxes and the two solstices. In September we celebrate equal day and night at our VIP client party.

David will be doing his uniques again for this private event.

September is amazing in Santa Fe. The light, the temperature and the overall atmosphere during this time make for a great gathering of artistically minded collectors and the on site burn of the converging lines is very special and unique.
